Winslow Homer: The Nature and Rhythm of Life from the Arkell Museum at Canajoharie

Fenimore Art Museum in Cooperstown presents rarely seen Winslow Homer works, offering new insight into the life of one of America's most celebrated artists. The exhibition features over 21 original works including oil paintings and delicate watercolors collected by Bartlett Arkell, the founder and first president of the Beech-Nut Packing Company. This marks the first time these exceptional Homer paintings will be displayed as a complete collection.

Winslow Homer (1836-1910) is regarded by many as the greatest American painter of the nineteenth century. This collection of Homer's masterworks includes examples from all phases of his career, representing work from his earliest known painting of a young boy feeding chickens to the famous painting Watching the Breakers created in 1896.

The exhibition was organized by the Arkell Museum at Canajoharie.

Mechanical music fills the air at The Farmers' Museum during its Band Organ Rally. Playing the happiest music on earth, these organs reproduce the sound of an entire band. Members of the Carousel Organ Association of America are bringing them and many hand-cranked grinder organs to Cooperstown, so come and hear them play!

Playing music that makes you smile, these organs are also fascinating mechanically and artistically. The rally features eight large band organs. Organs made by Ruth & Sohn, Gavioli, and Wurlitzer will be brought by members of the COAA from all over the eastern United States. In addition, many strolling hand-cranked grinder organs will be heard throughout the museum's historic village. Holding its own, the Mighty, Majestic, Military Band Organ of the Empire State, which makes its home at the museum, will give regular concerts in the Carousel Pavilion.

All the museum's delightful activities throughout the historic village and farmstead continue this weekend. This promises to be a memorable, fun-filled day for all!

Weeds, Leaves, Seeds, and Shoots
August 30, 2014, from 1:00-5:00 p.m.

“Weeds, Leaves, Seeds, and Shoots” is a learning experience in identifying wild plants, their nutritional benefits, and preparing them to eat offered at The Farmers’ Museum. The class is led by Marguerite Uhlmann-Bower, a practicing herbalist, Registered Nurse, and outdoors educator.

This class is all about wild herbs and foods that are either non-endangered or are considered invasive, what some might call “weeds.” Uhlmann-Bower reviews traditional uses of these plants and offers practical uses for optimal wellness and balance today, for the simple, beneficial, dense nutrition they supply.

Participants learn to harvest a plant that is not cultivated, always leaving enough for the plant to repropagate. Uhlmann-Bower leads a walk outdoors to identify plants of the season, while teaching the impact we have on plant populations by changing the micro-environment, soil organisms, and local species.

The main tastes of the season are cool, bitter and spicy foods that support one to remain cool and active: bed straw, bee balm, burdock, cattail pollen, chickweed, day lily, lambs quarters, mallow, rose, sow thistle, and wild mustard.

Indoors, participants learn to cook with nature’s bounty, using recipes made with in-season wild food. The class also features how to cook and bake with the various wild grains available. The class is sure to include a food and drink tasting.

The class is equally appropriate for plant beginners and experts, ages 12 and older of all abilities. Approximately 90 minutes of the class are held outdoors, so participants are encouraged to dress for the weather and bring a walking stick. The walk will be adjusted to match participants’ abilities. Bring a drink and snacks.

This class is one of a series spanning the seasons, each highlighting wild plant edibles in all their stages of growth. Marguerite Uhlmann-Bower, R.N., is author of "Healing the Injured Brain: Overcoming the Fog, the Fatigue and the Forgetfulness." She combines natural therapies in traditional and eclectic herbalism with evidence-based, health-oriented community education outreach programs.

A perfect blend of new attractions and trusted favorites make the 36th annual Harvest Festival at the most entertaining celebration of fall. Enjoy a wide range of performers, artisans, and exhibitors. Family activities include crafts, demonstrations, story time, and contests.

Many artisans demonstrate their skills, such as the cooper showing how he creates buckets and casks. You can also learn from rope-making, spinning, and fiber art demonstrations.

Help with harvesting potatoes and hand-scything hay. Children will enjoy agricultural activities that include corn shelling and grinding, grain flailing and winnowing, and 19th-century games in the schoolhouse. You'll even watch apples pressed to make fresh cider. The entire family can enjoy free carousel rides, sponsored by Matt Sohns and family.

An abundance of delicious foods from the season's harvest awaits festival-goers, such as roasted corn, sausage sandwiches, and homemade soup. Children have fun with food during apple bobbing.

Tell on the Terrace
Fenimore Art Museum
5798 State Hwy 80
Cooperstown, NY 13326
03:00 PM - 04:00 PM EST
Danielle Newell, 607-547-1450
d.newell@nysha.org
Come join us as a storyteller or a listener. Tell on the Terrace is an opportunity to connect with friends—and strangers—around memories and accounts of real-life experience, and to record valuable oral history. It brings together people who want to share something memorable that they have lived through, and people who want to hear it in an informal, audience-centered setting.

The theme on September 28 is Small Gestures, Big Consequences: Stories of random acts of kindness of (or to) strangers, of life-changing moments, of insignificant acts with big rewards.
