The Central Sands Water Walk is a public event in the Town of Rome where people of all ages and backgrounds come together and walk to raise awareness of the importance of water (quality and quantity) and our duty to protect it. Although the entire route is about 10 miles, people can choose to walk only part of it. An air-conditioned bus follows the walk to allow for rest and riding for anyone who needs it. The day starts with a sunrise ceremony led by a Native American Medicine Woman. This is followed by the walk, then a traditional Native American dinner and entertainment at the Rome Town Hall,
