Leadership is demonstrated through everyday behaviors, such as how you communicate, support others, make decisions, and create space for people to succeed, whether you are leading from behind, in the middle, or from the front. This presentation centers on a simple idea that applies to every role and every level: how we show up matters. In this session, Dr. Laurie Hillstock offers a clear and practical look at the habits that strengthen trust, credibility, and collaboration in any environment.

Strong leaders do not focus on visibility or authority; they focus on elevating others and developing the people around them. Through straightforward frameworks and real examples drawn from a variety of work and learning settings, participants will understand how to navigate tension, influence outcomes without relying on a title, and contribute to cultures where people can do their best work.

This session is designed for individuals at any stage of their journey. Attendees walk away with practical strategies they can use immediately to show up with confidence, emotional intelligence, and intention, regardless of their role or level of experience.
