Tools For Business Success...online at the Chamber!

October 2010

Tools for Business Success...

By far the most exciting, comprehensive online program we have ever seen, Tools For Business Success will be added to our home page in the very near future. (It's in the works right now!)

Finding useful, reliable business information is frustrating and time consuming. Businesses either face too little information or they are overwhelmed with too much disorganized and outdated information.

Tools for Business Success is a web-feed that allows organizations of any size to grow their local businesses by offering a full toolkit. The web-feed contains local, state, federal and best-of-the-web business information and tools.

With "Tools" for every business need, from "where to begin" if you want to start your own business to "where to go from here" if you have been established for a few years, this site has it all, and more!

Over 600 links comprise the website, listed and organized in an easy to follow format. Links include the Small Business Administration, a number of government agencies and even Emergency and Disaster management. The site is customized for Arizona and for our local county, and even contains specialty options strictly geared to Agricultural Business, Veteran's Businesses, and Manufacturing.

Many of the areas contain online classes, some free of charge, some at a nominal fee and all geared to assist your business knowledge. And, best of all, there is an online Live Chat feature for those who don't quite understand the legalize!

For those with unanswered questions, those who don't even know what questions to ask, and anyone you might know planning a business start up, this is the place for you!

We will be scheduling several beginning workshops to assist in navigating the site; we know that "easy" is a relative word and some may need a little help to get rolling! Watch our home page for the icon below, and pass the word along; this site is a Business Best!

Anyone who has lost track of time when using a computer knows the propensity to dream, the urge to make dreams come true and the tendency to miss lunch.

Important Immigration—Related Employment Information

From the Office of the Arizona Attorney General

The Civil Rights Division of the Arizona Attorney General's Office has received a grant from the United States Department of Justice, Office of Special Counsel, to help educate the business community about preventing immigration-related employment discrimination. While it is against the law to hire undocumented immigrants under both state and federal law, it is also illegal to discriminate against lawful workers on the basis of national origin or work authorization status.

The Immigration and Nationality Act was the first federal law that makes it illegal for employers to knowingly hire persons who are not authorized to work in the United States. The law requires employers to check new employees' documents to confirm the identity and work eligibility of all persons hired after November 1986. Employers may hire only those persons authorized to work in the United States and they must complete the Employment Eligibility Verification Form I-9 for all new employees, both U.S. citizens and non-citizens. There are many documents and combination of documents that are acceptable, as long as they appear to the employer to be reasonably genuine. Not complying with the Form I-9 requirements can result in sanctions against employers.

Congress recognized that employer sanctions might discourage employers from hiring certain eligible workers if they looked or sounded foreign, so the law also prohibits discrimination in hiring and firing on the basis of citizenship status or national origin. Citizenship status discrimination refers to unequal treatment because of citizenship or immigration status. National origin discrimination refers to unequal treatment because of nationality, which includes place of birth, appearance, accent and language. Employers who discriminate may be required to pay fines and penalties, to hire or rehire the employee, and to pay back wages.

The Office of Special Counsel in the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice enforces the provisions against discrimination. The law covers all employers with four or more employees for citizenship discrimination and employers with four to fourteen employees for national origin discrimination. Before employers make any hiring decisions, they should make sure that they are familiar with the requirements of the Immigration and Nationality Act. The Office of Special Counsel has an employer hotline and a website that are dedicated to answering questions from employers. The toll-free number is 1-800-255-8155 and the website is www.justice.gov/crt/osc. Employers may also contact the Attorney General's Office at 602-542-5263 or visit their website at www.azag.gov for additional information.

ASU 5th Nationally in Student Preparation!

Wall Street Journal ranks ASU 5th nationally for producing the best-qualified graduates

The ability to get a good job after graduating from college is one of the best returns on investing in higher education. The Wall Street Journal set out to measure this outcome by asking job recruiters to identify the schools “that best prepare students to land jobs that are satisfying, well paid and have growth potential.”

Arizona State University ranked high on the list, placing 5th among the top universities favored by employers for job recruiting. Where ASU excelled? Recruiters commended the university’s well-rounded and talented student body, its emphasis on letting recruiters connect directly with faculty to find out about programs and identify promising prospects, and its close proximity to business communities that result in work-savvy students with internship experience.

Research and business partnerships also play a key role and ASU was noted for its strength in this area. According to The Journal, “Universities and companies strike research collaborations that often include student participation. Companies get an early look at promising students, leading to internships and job offers.”

According to specific majors, ASU also ranked 19th on the top twenty-five for business/economics graduates and 24th for engineering graduates.

The Arizona Republic commended the university for its achievement in an editorial, writing “In tough times, ASU excels in matching students with jobs. And not just any jobs...well-paid positions with growth potential – the Holy Grail of economic development.”

The Republic editorial also states that a “strong pool of qualified university graduates is a long term asset in attracting companies to locate in Arizona.”

As added evidence that ASU provides the best value in higher education, its tuition for incoming freshmen ranks among the lowest in the WSJ survey.

The Wall Street Journal collaborated with Seattle-based salary and career-data provider PayScale.com and Boston-based human-resource management firm Cambria Consulting to seek feedback from large public and private companies in nearly 30 industries, including finance, consulting, technology, engineering, marketing and health care, as well as nonprofits and government agencies.

The Journal asked companies to rank schools that produce the best-qualified graduates—overall and by major. Recruiters made clear they preferred big state schools to elite liberal arts schools, such as the Ivies.

Rounding out the overall top five on the list, in descending order, are Penn State, Texas A&M, University of Illinois and Purdue.

Watch Out!

Red Flags to Help Spot Fake Job Websites

(September 14, 2010- Phoenix, AZ) Unfortunately some job seekers will learn a hard lesson in realizing that not all job offers and work at home opportunity websites are trustworthy. BBB offers advice to those on the job hunt on how to protect their personal information as well as their wallets from phony job websites.

As the leader in advancing marketplace trust, your BBB has compiled the following list of common website features, which in the wrong hands can be used to convince job seekers the offer and website is real:

Use of testimonials

Red Flag: A common feature of a fake work-at-home or job opportunity website is the use of a real life 'working mom' testimonial.

What You Can Do: If a job offer or website looks suspicious, Google the name of the person in the testimonial and see if that name is being used in other work-at-home websites. Also, conduct a Google search to see if results match with other information and photos used on the site.

National or local news 'endorsements'

Red Flag: A fake job offer or website may feature logos for local or national news outlets with statements such "As Seen On" claiming that the job or product to be sold was a featured story.

What You Can Do: First research to see if the news outlet really exists. If it is a legitimate news source, watch or read the story to determine if the reporter is covering the hiring company or just a common product or service offered by the company.

'Dead End' Tabs

Red Flag: The website has multiple tabs on the top of sides to indicate more information is available, yet none is available.

What You Can Do: Click on all available tabs to review content. A common feature of fraudulent job websites are dead end tabs on the webpage. All of the tabs will lead back to the same page, which typically will be a sales splash page asking for personal information in order to learn more about the opportunity.

Little or No Company Info

Red Flag: There is little or no contact information for the hiring company on their website.

What You Can Do: Research the company online at bbb.org. You may search by company name, phone number and URL. Be cautious if there is no contact information available and the only way to communicate is by email.

To request an interview with a BBB spokesperson, please contact Felicia Thompson at 602-212-2237 or email ftompson@arizonabbb.org.

West Valley Chamber Alliance; Election Information!

From our West Valley Chamber Alliance Lobbyist, Elaine Arena, important election information;

ELECTIONS

Voter turnout for the August primary election was substantially higher than predicted, reaching 30%, the highest in 20 years. Most legislative seats were determined in the primary. About half a dozen seats are in play for the general election but we already have a fair idea of what the 50th Arizona Legislature will look like. There could be a couple of party changes in those seats but on balance probably not enough to change the majority, though there is an outside chance that the Senate could swing. The big unknown is who will lead the Senate Majority caucus. Frontrunners are Steve Pierce, Prescott, running for his second term and Russell Pearce, Mesa, best known for his commitment to rid Arizona of illegal immigrants.
