Intergovernmental Retreat Brings Leaders Together

Pictured: East Grand Forks Leaders, local businesses, The Chamber and EDA staff.

In February, East Grand Forks leaders gathered for an Intergovernmental Retreat to discuss key issues affecting local government, Northland College, and legislative matters requiring collaboration.

A dozen local business leaders also participated, sharing their insights and priorities. The session was facilitated by Chamber and EDA staff, who provided a report on regional initiatives and economic development efforts.

CHAMBER NEWS

Local Non-profits Share Best Practices for Increased Efficiency

Recently, several local non-profit executives gathered to exchange insights on improving organizational efficiency and time management. The session, led by Tamara Bertram of Legal Services of ND, engaged 20 Chamber member non-profits in a deep dive into streamlining operations.

Key Takeaways:

- Actionable Strategies: Learn methods to reduce time-consuming tasks.
- Problem-Solving Techniques: Discover practical approaches for identifying and addressing inefficiencies.
- Networking Opportunities: Connect with fellow non-profit leaders and share valuable insights.

Upcoming Event:

If your organization is a non-profit and a Chamber member, join us for our next meeting on May 13th from 1 pm to 3 pm. The focus will be on program evaluation and measurement.

This meeting is one of four sessions hosted by the Chamber in 2025, dedicated to promoting organizational efficiency, best practices, and continuous improvement among our non-profit community.

Stay tuned for more details and we look forward to seeing you there!

Chamber Fights the Time Zone Divide

The ND Legislature is considering a Bill that would require ND be on standard time year round. This change would create a time zone divide between North Dakota and Minnesota for half the year, leading to confusion and significant disruptions—especially for border communities like Grand Forks and East Grand Forks. Our businesses, workforce, and families rely on synchronized time to function efficiently. See full Chamber testimony at this link.

Also we encourage businesses in Grand Forks and Fargo to sign on the joint GF/EGF and Fargo/Moorhead Chamber sign on letter. Add your business or organization by clicking on this link.

Chamber Military Affairs Committee Welcomes B-1 Airmen

The Chamber's Military Affairs Committee (MAC) recently welcomed more than 300 Airmen from the 28th Bomb Wing in Rapid City, who are temporarily stationed in Grand Forks for the next 10 months.

A special thanks to the City of Grand Forks for helping provide food for the gathering and supporting our military community.

Meg-A-Latte Coffee House

2990 32nd Ave S

Grand Forks, ND 58201

<https://meg-a-latte.com/>

For Meg Wold, coffee is more than a drink—it's a lifestyle. Her journey began as a college student, managing a coffee shop, where she fell in love with the vibrant culture of connection and conversation. Inspired by the sense of community a simple cup could create, Meg returned to Williston, North Dakota, with a vision. In February 2012, she opened Meg-A-Latte, blending her love for coffee with her passion for people. Today, it's a cherished hub where community thrives.

Meg-A-Latte started as a small coffee shop with a big dream: to be more than a place to grab a cup of coffee. It quickly became a community hub where early-morning regulars, study groups, and friends could gather and connect. Fueled by her passion, Meg expanded beyond Williston to Watford City and Minot. Now, with new locations opening in Grand Forks, Bismarck, and Fargo, Meg-A-Latte continues to bring its signature warmth and exceptional coffee to even more North Dakota communities.

Erica Martin-Macintosh named chair of UND School of Medicine & Health Sciences Department of Radiology

Erica Martin-Macintosh, M.D., has been named chair of the UND School of Medicine & Health Sciences (SMHS) Department of Radiology.

Specializing in diagnostic and nuclear radiology, Martin-Macintosh graduated from UND's M.D. program in 2010 and later completed both a diagnostic radiology residency and nuclear radiology fellowship at Mayo Clinic Rochester, Minn.

"I am honored to return to UND as chair of the Department of Radiology," said Martin-Macintosh, who is certified by the American Board of Radiology and practices radiology at Sanford Health in Fargo, N.D. "This institution had a profound impact on my own development as an undergraduate and physician. I look forward to contributing to its continued success."

Among other duties, Martin-Macintosh's job as chair will be to oversee the radiology curriculum while working collaboratively with other SMHS departments to incorporate radiology into the School's interprofessional framework; ensure that third- and fourth-year clerkship students obtain hands-on training during the radiology elective and receive timely, formative feedback; and collaborate with clinical faculty in radiology across North Dakota to increase medical student interest in radiology as a medical specialty.

On this last, the need for more radiologists across the country is vast, said Martin-Macintosh. As of this writing, the American College of Radiology lists over 1,500 full time radiology positions open at health facilities across the U.S. Over the past decade, only six percent of medical doctors graduating from North Dakota's only medical school – 43 out of nearly 700 UND School of Medicine & Health Sciences M.D. grads – successfully matched in radiology as a specialty, which follows a national trend at most American medical schools.

Part of the reason for these figures is that radiology residency programs are limited – particularly in the upper-Midwest – making radiology one of the most competitive specialties graduating students can choose.

All of this is why Martin-Macintosh has made it her mission to help prepare North Dakota's students.

"I hope not only to support student and trainee integration of imaging into their future clinical practice, but also to potentially spark their interest in radiology as a career," she explained, adding that because radiology is often the first step to identifying a patient's condition, it's important to help students understand that radiologists directly impact clinical outcomes. "With a shortage of radiologists in many regions, including our great state of North Dakota, there is an urgent need to develop this profession. This need creates a unique opportunity for medical students to pursue a career in radiology, a field that plays a pivotal role in shaping the future of medicine."

Martin-Macintosh assumed the role of radiology chair at UND – a part-time, non-tenured position – on Feb. 16. She will continue her radiology practice in Fargo.
