Developing Leadership One Manager at a Time

Business representatives from various industries learned ways to improve their leadership traits at the Supervisor Essentials workshop held Wed. at the Georgia Department of Labor. As a part of the Chamber's commitment to workforce development, these workshops are held three times per year to supplement on-the-job training with a half-day "crash course" addressing issues specific to those in leadership positions.

"Almost all employees perform better when you take the time to train them for a new job or to do their job better. Training makes for a happier, more productive workforce," said presenter Bruce Allred, Smith Drug Company. Other workshop facilitators included Kenneth Rosier with Brighter Day International Ministries, Inc and Kimberly O'Quinn with Valdosta Country Club.

The next Supervisor Essential Workshop will be held on Oct. 12 at the GDOL. For program or registration information, please visit www.ValdostaChamber.com/SupervisorEssentials.
